2. The formation of the TERTIATE Inter-organization, the value [ ] of which is in the order of £1,000,000. There are various different versions that it was a secret one on the part of the complementary agreement to form this Inter-organisation. Only two sources were accessed, one of those sources was Baldwin, a man who is not involved in the RGA (Testapo) where the Tertiary Inter-organisation was formed initially in 1945 and had brought to London later that year.

[This is the expression that Gold was designed to bring about for the purpose of investigating the Black Gold conspiracy. In one hand it would constitute a faction in opposition to STURM, KALTERBACHEN and others. DESENTH did not intend, in setting up his conspiracy to include Gold; personal or to give the name to, the scope or spirit of a secret police. On the other hand he wished to use KALTEN as experienced in carrying out spiritualism from of his organization. Therefore, although KALTEN may not actually have been a member of HACKE, he was consulted on it and therefore knew something about it.]

3. STEAR told [ ] that the SIS sometime during '44-45 had got control of "SWEET", Soviet chief of Dnipro in the course of some double operations. According to Mr. STEAR, "SWEET" was blackmail with funds assigned to the handling of certain duties under Russian control; that refers to the attention of the Russians through agent reports and the Russians were

4. Agent of this Bureau was sent to Berlin as a COMMISSIONER [ ] for three years. His name was LARSEN. [ ] English Governor [ ] had informed from K. F. D. [ ] he was the man most trusted by the Soviet section of the U.S.A., that he had been an anti-Nazi agent since 1933, and was the best spy for the U.S.A. He had been a member of the Comintern one of the first 15 agents in Germany industrial spy working for [ ] and had got into competition with a former German candidate for [ ] with the BSV and the KGB had forced the U.S. to recall him. [ ] did this in order to make way for their candidate.
This had been done by forcing LARSEN to East Berlin to meet his case officer (SOKTSEV) and by arresting the man [ ] and framing him on the basis of his former Nazi work. [ ] did it in collaboration with SOCHIAK, [ ] [ ] noted this very day was not more detailed especially the later phases. LARSEN had been especially valuable before his take-up as a [ ] source in Germany, reporting on the then most secret BSV and KGB. LARSEN circulated in German police and IS circled on the basis of his wartime position and acquaintances. The Russians initially were eager for his information but as things went on they began to play down its value and finally pressured the Police into recalling LARSEN to break for interrogation. Only later did it come out, according to SOKTSEV, that the real reason behind this Soviet move was to eliminate LARSEN from candidacy for a allegedly high-ranking KGB job for which they had a preferred candidate [ ] [ ] [ ] After interrogation LARSEN was given a long jail sentence in Warsaw (there was no public trial), but was released in 1950 as a result of the October revolution. The Soviets then suggested that LARSEN be sent back to Germany to resume his agent-functions.
The US terminated its contract of activity with LARSEN and he expressed willingness to return to Germany but on an account for the Soviets. After a year or so further stay in Poland during which he recovered from the long incarceration, LARSEN did return to Germany (presumably 1951) and was to try now for a while and gradually acclimatize himself again to the German scene.

B C It found further confirmation that KREMLIN was working on the KGB from two sources. The first was the material on the activities of the KGB from the source, the first was the KGB agent, to whom [ ] was known. He knew from this that he was a KGB agent, and he could hear that KGB had served as a contact in Germany for KREMLIN. The second additional source was the EAST SIDE of the KGB experts on anti-fascist operations who worked closely in connection with Dept. II Section 5 of the US counterespionage organizations, chiefly Ukrainians. It was from KASLAROW, who was given to frequent reminiscing, that [ ] once heard in the context of a general operational discussion, the story about RUEK and KREMLIN and MUNICIPALITY told at a

2-3/2 Considering the further EACIE information given by [ ] in 12-3/2, page 2, he elucidated as follows. He heard directly from [ ] that the KGB was preparing an approach to Dr. (Bertrand) SALVINE, one of CORSENET's former secretaries. The remainder of the material on p. 1 of P-3/2 was all copied from a KGB document dated towards the end of 1972.

sent through T.R.C. to Dept I, Section 3, CI subsection (Germany).
[ ] Control of such figures and neo-Nazi organizations is simply a KGB operation of such and does not indicate that any of the persons named are under KGB control. [ ] does not know which KGB controls.
